LAAGER 8

The early arrivals at Imhoff were Doug and Sue, Allen and Meryl, Alex and Colleen, and Dave and Angela. When Les and Marieta arrived Allen moved his car smartly out of the way and parked against a power point that he hadn't seen. Carol arrived and soon after came Scotty, with her 'van making "a funny sound". Lastly Wayne and Vanessa arrived to complete the company.
Dave wasted no time and that same afternoon Robbie's Roost was put up with lots of different pegs, because Dave had forgotten the big pegs. Soon afterwards the first fires were started, and the visiting and braaing continued into the evening as happily as usual.
The next morning Dave had the notice-board up, with the day's agenda, so everyone would know when to start peeling, boiling, roasting or frying and starting the fires for the spit-roast so that it would all come together at the right time. With that planned and known, the morning was for visiting, decorating tents and caravans and last-minute trips to the shops.
That evening, with decorated caravans all around, and Robbie's shining with decorated tables and other tables well laden with the fruits of our labours, the event started with Dave welcoming us, and Grace being said before the meal. Then we feasted and later received presents before feasting again on puddings. The chatting went on long after the meal ended.
Sunday. The next morning everyone attended Scotty's Christmas Carol Service, with the proceeds of the collection to be donated to City Mission.

INDABA.

Dave welcomed everyone, and thanked everyone for a good dinner, for the organisation, the decorations, the peelers and cookers, and thanked Angela for procuring the meat and potatoes.

Apologies. Dawn and Brian, and Johan and Rosemary.

Spoons and fines. Colleen was late for the potato peeling, and Sue got a fine for splitting on Doug about dragging the van electrics.
Spoons. Allen got a spoon for demolishing a power point.
Scotty, for demolishing a jockey wheel
Doug, for demolishing his caravan's electrics
Alex got the chief spoon for being the least deserving of the Chief Spoon.
The GOOD SPOON was awarded to Scotty who was accusing the world of stealing her pants, then she found them and had the courage to apologise to all she had blamed.

Lastly, Mike and Mazz arrived to visit us and were very welcome even though they missed Indaba.
